THE JUNIOR CLASS

presents

THE 1946 QUAKER

William Penn College

Oskaloosa, Iowa

Foreword

The Junior Class presents the 1946 Quaker to you, hoping that in the years to come the memories of this year will revive and live for you as you turn the pages.

The year 1946 has not been just another year in the life of William Penn College, but has been a year of transition. Individuals of different creeds and religions have mingled together in an effort to live in accordance with the ideals of the school.

On these pages is recorded the story of the group and individual activities of the campus. The Junior Class offers the Quaker to you, expecting it to serve as a refresher course in old age and in the years preceding.

Dedication

From his classes and informal fellowship we have Gained inspiration and wisdom.

By his own life and faith we have been challenged to live creatively.

In gratitude for his untiring service to William Penn College and to us, the students, we dedicate this 1946 Quaker to

The Faculty and Staff

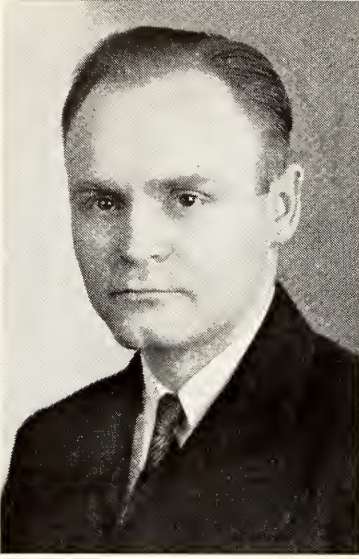

The guiding influence of any student body is its faculty. To a great extent a student's thoughts and ideals are directed by classroom discussions.

William Penn College is fortunate in having a faculty committed to the highest standards and ideals, and vitally interested in helping the students with whom they are working to become worthwhile citizens of the world.

Mr. and Mrs. EDWIN MCGREW

Though they have been absent from the campus for several years, President Emeritus and Mrs. McGrew are still remembered by a number of friends at William Penn College. We are deeply indebted to these two who have given so freely and unselfishly of their time and energy to the college in the past.

PRESIDENT HINSHAW

To the students of William Penn College:

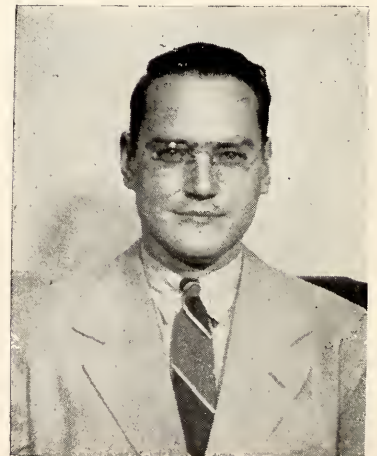

WHILE NATIONS have locked arms in titanic conflict, while incomprehensible tragedy has stalked the world, while men have sought desperately to turn from ways of war to paths of peace, we have engaged in the life mirrored in these pages. Dimly we sense now what we shall confidently assert many years hence—that enduring, imperishable values are inextricably interwoven with the fun and frivolity, the happiness and heartaches, the loyalties and friendships, the aspirations and hopes here recorded. More permanent than Penn's sturdy buildings, more lovely than her campus in springtime, more thrilling than the beautiful strains of the "Messiah," is that which we have visioned here together—dreams of peace and brotherhood, ideals of sacrificial service, and abiding faith in God and man.

Cecil Hinshaw

FOR THE members of the class of 1947, we all hope that this year has been one of the most vital and profitable they have experienced. In a period of dislocation and uncertainty such as we are now passing through, a true sense of values is needed as much as, if not more than, ever before. It is in a college grounded on ideals of brotherhood and service that such a sense of values should develop and deepen. One of the chief aims of William Penn College is to be a laboratory for community living where through study and life we may come to appreciate and understand such principles of action in preparation for the years ahead. The Junior Class has done much to foster a fuller realization of this ideal. The challenge for the final year is to help the college community make our fellowship richer as we attempt to achieve this aim even better than before.

THE CLASS OF 1946

In the fall of 1942 a group of fun-loving freshmen, fresh from their high school successes, gathered on the Penn campus. This group, banded together under green hats, soon got in the swing of activity. They participated enthusiastically in all phases of campus life.

However, this class of enthusiastic freshmen soon dwindled in number. Uncle Sam called many of their males before the year was over, and soon their class was mostly made of girls. By now, though, two of these veterans have returned to join the ranks of this class.

Four years, full of work and play, have sped by; and this spring the remaining members of that class graduated. Though one of the smallest graduating classes in Penn's history, the seniors make up in quality what they lack in quantity. Their achievements in the classroom and in the many extracurricular activities have been many and great.

We hate to see them go, well miss them much. But to these seniors, our friends and classmates, we doff our hats and say

In the midst of the years of war, in 1943, a group of boys and girls, smaller than usual, came to the Penn campus for the first time—the class of 1947.

They began their days here with a bang, by disappearing from the campus on the night of Faculty Filibuster, the traditional night for their initiation to begin.

The daring and original spirit which found that early expression is still to be found in the class, though tempered now by three years of college experience, experience in college sports, classrooms, work activities, writing for the Chronicle, and establishing the Penn Playdium. And the greatest expression of the talent of the class is found in the Quaker for this year.

And so these are the juniors, standing now three quarters of the way through the experience of college living, looking eagerly forward to the final year ahead, and to what lies beyond.

With "Smilin'" Bob Ask at the helm, this year's sophomores have sailed gaily through another sea of outstanding achievements to emerge prospective juniors. Sophomores have helped furnish a great deal of the pep and enthusiasm, scholastic ability, athletic prowess, and dramatic and musical talent for the total college life. With representatives in every phase of campus life, the sophomore class can be justly proud of its many important contributions to the passing parade of Pennites.

As lively and enthusiastic a bunch of freshies as ever "happened" to a college descended upon the Penn campus in the fall of '45. Gifted with talent and ability, the class entertained upperclassmen royally during Freshman week, and from thence proceeded to show themselves indispensable, as well as incorrigible. Gathered from points as far apart as Philadelphia and Panama City, the freshmen were a cosmopolitan group, but they also possessed an unusual spirit of cooperation and fellowship. Although their ranks were depleted by the loss of several boys during the first semester, they were swelled again at the beginning of the second with a number of newcomers.

The freshman class has made contributions to the college community along many lines. Especially noticeable were Owen, who shone on the basketball floor; Winnie, who brightened the dramatic stage; Willa and Rosie, who were athletic fiends, Errol, Alonzo, and the Parsons, who belong in the front ranks of Penn's musicians; Cinder, Jensen, and Joe, who were tops as comic relief; and several unnamed freshies who excelled in the art of campusstry.

The freshmen, now improved and enlightened by a year of college life, look forward only to less joyous days of study, responsibility and senile decline. Nevertheless, they added intellect, ability, and, most important of all, life to Penn. Perhaps the college has balanced the scales by giving them a little more knowledge, a little more confidence and poise, and some new friendships.

the Art of Concentration

The intricate society of the modern world demands from us a broad and comprehensive background of knowledge in fact and theory. This background in the sciences and the arts can be gained only by concentrated and intensive study. And so, in providing students with the tools with which to gain the best in life, William Penn has as its primary aim - the development of the fine art of concentration.

Meditation

"A man's religion, if the right sort, will sharpen his faculties, quicken his energies, heighten his self-respect" (Spencer). A lifetime of work toward wrong and false goals is a lifetime wasted. Only by being sure of the important values of life can a person make his contribution to the world important. Because William Penn students feel strongly that these ultimate values can only be realized through individual emphasis on the spiritual phases of life, an ideal of the college which is very important is the art of meditation and concentration.

The Y.W.C.A. has tried to reach out to all women on the campus and lend a helping hand. A series of programs was carried out this year with the Y.M.C.A. in which the combined group divided into study groups on economic problems, music appreciation, and racial minorities. Other programs varied from the writing of anti-conscription letters to congressmen to speakers on reconstruction work abroad.

Precision, Thought, Planning

The words of a recently popular song went something like this: "Wishing will make it so." But William Penn students have discovered for themselves that the dreams of life—the goals and the ideals—can never be achieved by mere wishing. In the whole of college life constant effort and deep thinking are needed if we are to arrive at the goals to which we aspire. Therefore, in our school publications, and activities, in our school community as a whole, in our discussions and considerations of problems beyond school life, William Penn students emphasize the necessity of precision, of thought, and of planning, in "making it so."

President: Edna Hadley, Vice-President: Marjorie Longstreth, Secretary-Treasurer: Eunice Jensen.

International Relations Club

The purpose of the International Relations Club is to broaden the knowledge of students to world situations and to strive to promote world brotherhood. Current world problems were introduced by student-led discussions or by campus visitors at each meeting. Paul Miller and several members of the club attended the Mississippi Valley Conference of International Relations at Emporia, Kansas, March 2 and 3. Experience gained on the trip broadened educational and social interests.

Forensics

Forensics Club was reorganized the second semester after two and a half years of idleness. But in spite of this handicap, the returned from the state meet with three superior ratings and on excellent--Owen Newlin, Hal Eberhard, and Jim Holmes were the ones receiving the honors. With this beginning, the club should be an outstanding one on the campus in the near future.

Chronicle Staff

The Chronicle staff has had its trials during the year. Probably the highlight of the year was the April Fool Chronicle in which revelations of unheard of happenings on the campus caused many a whisper and shout. With the aid of an occasional mimeograph edition the last semester, The Chronicle was looking up.

Quaker Staff

The Junior Class has encountered many problems in preparing the 1946 Quaker for the students and friends of William Penn College. In spite of a late start and numerous difficulties in securing the necessary materials, we have endeavored to present on the pages of this book pictures of your friends and of the familiar scenes which will bring happy thoughts to your minds in the years to come.

Cooperation

One of the great unsolved problems of the world today is that of man's relationship to society. William Penn students believe in democracy and its attributes—equality and brotherhood—as the final solution. The college community can function smoothly and each individual on the campus can develop himself to the fullest only if all work together harmoniously. Therefore an important ideal of the college is that of cooperation in all phases of life here.

Community Council

Elected each fall by the democratic system of proportional representation, the College Community Council serves as the governing body, both in large and small matters, of the school. Seven students, four faculty members, and three members of the community-at-large represent the college at the monthly meetings of the Council. During this, its first year of functioning, the Council has proved itself able to bring together the thinking of the college community and to arrive at decisions concerning the college's welfare.

President: Reva Standing, Vice-President:
Louise O'Neal, Secretary: Vesta Newlin,
Treasurer: Eleanor Zelliott.

Women's House Association

The Women's House Association is an organization for the purpose of unifying the girls living in the dormitory. The dormitory rules have been liberalized this year. Some of the association meetings have been riotous affairs where unusual talents have been discovered.

The good Quaker ladies for whom the cottages of the women's dormitory are named might be slightly amazed at the several younger generations later. When a complex mixture of book worms, happy-go-luckies, and happy-go-lucky book worms get together, the result can be anything. Considering the variety of personalities of the dorm populace, The House Association can be credited with a successful year.

Men's House Association

The Men's House Association is an organization for all the men living for the first time in "the old Gibbs house." Formerly it was a place of curiosity which, with too much adventurous spirit, might cost $25.

Its primary purpose is to maintain close relations among the men. This was accomplished by conducting informal meetings wherein problems pertinent to each man were considered.

The Men's House Association sponsored a party April 13.

President: Jim Holmes, Secretary-Treasurer: Marshall Jensen.

President: Phyllis Hoover, Vice-President: Eleanor Cadwallader, Secretary: Helen Stanley, Treasurer: Miriam Walthall.

Home Ec Club

The Home Economics Club includes all girls on the campus interested in homemaking. The meetings were varied and included everything from a candle-light initiation of new members to a birthday party with a parade of baby pictures. The traditional social events, the Christmas party and the Mother's Tea, were two outstanding events of the year.

Basketball

Playing one of the toughest schedules in the conference, Penn's basketball aggregation placed eighth among the thirteen Iowa Conference schools in the 1945-1946 cage race. Although winning but four of their fourteen contests, the Pennmen proved to be a colorful team and though losing to the conference power-houses by top heavy scores, made their opponents go all out in every game.

Coach Hogendorn's cagers reached their peak form when downing the highly touted Dubuque University team, 43-41 in a mid-season thriller. The following week, the Pennmen were victims of the same sort, in succumbing to Parsons 46-44 on a last second basket offer, having led throughout the fray.

Jack Oxenreider, the Quaker's ace pivotman for four years, concluded a brilliant basketball career at Penn by setting a new conference individual scoring record. Jack netted 252 points, his total exceeding the old record set by Evo Sjechlocha, Simpson forward, in 1945 by nine points.

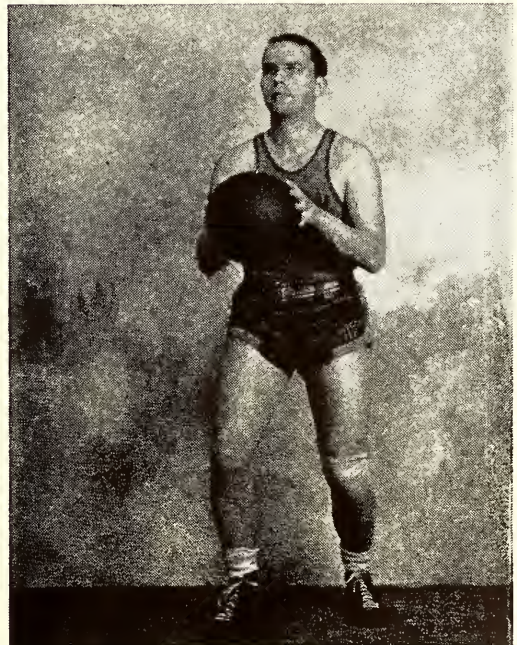

Jack Oxenreider	Senior
Des Moines	Center
6'	170 lbs

Jack, our versatile athlete, wound up one of the most brilliant athletic careers in Penn's history, especially making his merits on the basketball court. This last season, as a four-year regular, he broke the Iowa Conference scoring record. Wearing that familiar No. "4", he collected 252 points for an average of 18 in the 14 conference games played. In four years of playing, he collected 832 points in 48 conference games. Jack was also honored by being named on the Associated Press and United Press All-Conference First Teams at the center position. "Ox" will be missed next season as he hangs up his suit along side such former Penn stars as Carl Houser, Bill Trent, and John McCormick.

John Ask	Senior
Ottumwa	Forward
5'8"	160 lbs.

John is a fast, shifty forward who finished his second semester as a regular. Although the smallest of the regulars, he out-manuevered the opponent's defense to collect much needed points. Johnny collected many of these with long, deadly shots.

Bob Ask Sophomore
Ottumwa Guard
6' 170 lbs.

Playing his second season as regular guard, Bob proved his worth as a steady performer in the back court, playing some good defensive games as well as collecting points.

Delbert Smith Junior
Oskaloosa Guard
6'2" 167 lbs.

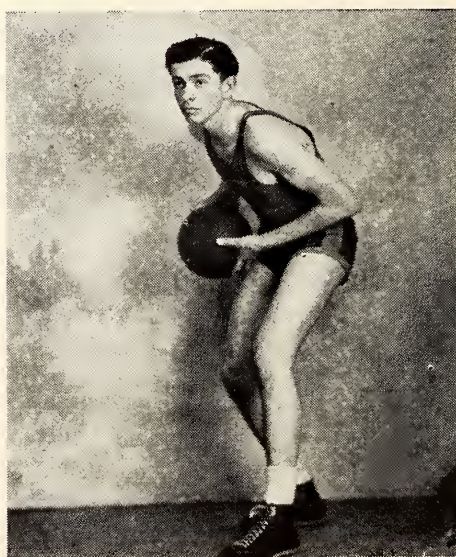

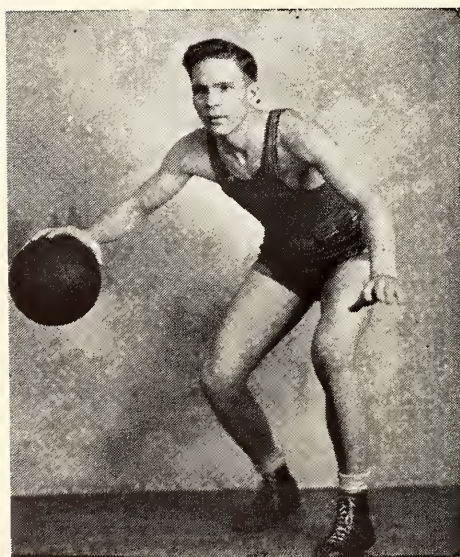

Played good defensive game all season, was usually assigned to opponents' high scorer. Also helped out in point department, being third among Penn scorers.

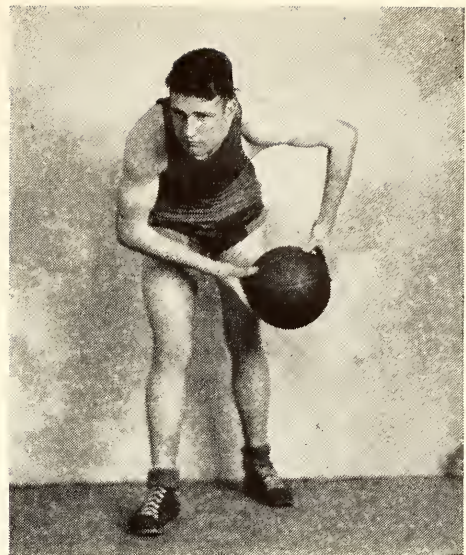

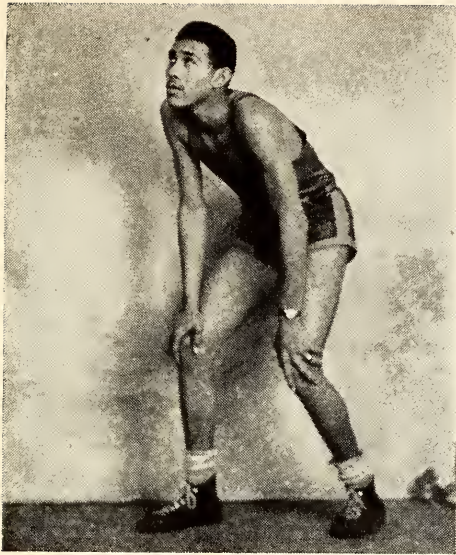

Owen Newlin Freshman
Grimes Forward
6' 165 lbs.

Only first year man to play regularly through the season. He developed fast as Penn's second main scorer. Hit his peak in Simpson game by collecting 19 points.

Roy Knight Freshman
Springville Guard
6'2" 178 lbs.

Roy had quite a bit of action in most games. A little experience would go a long way for Roy and make him a valuable man next year.

Joe Smith Freshman
Oskaloosa Center
6' 156 lbs

Everett Latham Freshman
Marshalltown Forward
5'9" 155 lbs.

Joe will have an opportunity for more action next year. He was understudy for Jack Oxenreider, thus not having much experience in regular games.

Everett was used at forward after he entered school the second semester. Although he did not see a great deal of action, he was a welcome addition to the reserve strength of the team.

Women's Athletic Association

The Women's Athletic Association, an organization whose purpose is to promote an interest in sports, has had an active year. Letters are awarded for participation and skill in the various sports. This organization sponsored the annual hay ride in the fall and the May Fete in the spring, at which the queen and cardinal were crowned. In addition to these traditional activities, the W.A.A. sponsored a Halloween Carnival.

Letter Club

For the first time in several years, the Letter Club has again taken its place among the active organizations on the campus. The Club was first organized in 1938, and is composed of all the major athletic letter winners. As soon as an athlete is recognized as a letter winner, he is automatically taken into the club as a regular member.

Standing: Roy Knight, Owen Newlin, George De Boef

Seated: John Ask, Bob Ask, Max Franklin, Delbert Smith, Jack Oxenreider

Pep Club

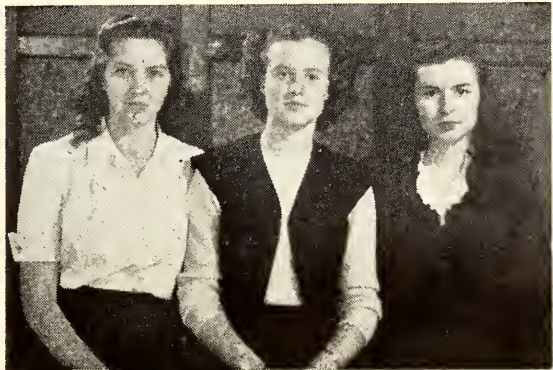

The Pep Club, composed entirely of upperclass girls, is a club to promote the college spirit and enthusiasm for the college athletic events.

This year the girls chose uniforms of gold skirts and blue blouses. The day of every game they wore these uniforms to show their loyalty and enthusiasm for sports and for the team.

A pep rally at the initial "P" was held at the beginning of the year, and short pep sessions in honor of each game have been conducted by the Pep Club through the year. The annual basketball banquet was held at the YMCA where the Pep Club girls acted as hostesses to the team.

Join the Pep Club if you want action!

Captain: Louise O'Neal
Lieutenant: Eleanor Cadwallader
Sergeant: Leona Byerly

Back row: Winnette Williamson, Hilda Taylor, Ruth O'Neal, Barbara Mather, Louise O'Neal, (sponsor), Willa Certaine, Anna Rosedale, Hazel Hadley, Betty Boyd, Winnifred Stanley.

Green Peppers

You have probably guessed that this name has been applied to freshmen. The club is under the direction of the Pep Club. Its main purpose is to spread enthusiasm at inter-collegiate games.

Every member was a loyal supporter this year. Ruth O'Neal acted as cheerleader, a few played in the band, and all the rest took their turns at taking tickets. Everyone supported the team with zeal and vigor.

Though the freshmen are supposed to be green, the only thing green about these girls was their green and black shirts. And they really became a familiar sight at every game of the season.

President: Anna Rosedale,
Vice-President: Ruth O'Neal

Entertainment and Production

Back row: Marion Van Dyke, Errol Haines, Herbert Nichols, Roy Knight, Owen Newlin, Bob Ask, Oscar Sauerlender

Second row: Edna Hadley, Eleanor Cadwallader, Madge Ver Steeg, Warrene Cadwallader, Phyllis Hoover

Bottom row: Winnette Williamson, Gail Newby, Donna Parsons, Frances Parsons

Chorus

This year the Chorus cooperated with other students from Penn and Kletzing, as well as some outside friends of the college, in an inspiring presentation of the "Messiah" at Christmas time. The performance, under the able direction of Elias Blum, was appreciatively received by a capacity audience. It is hoped that the rendition of the Messiah may become an annual custom on the Penn campus.

Back row: Frances Parsons, Ruth O'Neal, Donna Parsons, Jane Wilson, Owen Newlin, Virginia Perry, Betty Boyd

In front: Bob Ask, Winifred Stanley

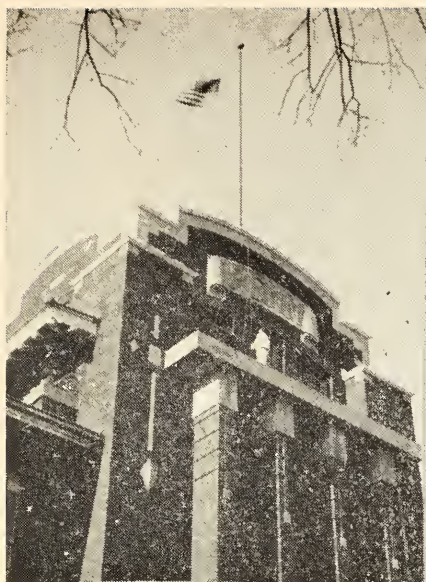

Drama Club

Drama Club has been in a dormant stage because of lack of sponsorship. At the beginning of the year, the club joined the Artists and Lecturers Committee, but in April it donned an "independent streak" and sallied forth on its own initiative to produce a short one-act comedy titled "Ladies Alone." (Titles can often be misleading.) Winnie appears as "the moon's no good without a man" Marge. "Sure and ye wouldn't be blamin' the poor man now" says Helen Ox as Norah, followed by coy Virginia Perry as Peggy.

The Silver Masque welcomes back old members who have been gone, and it includes two more to sit at the seat of honor.

President: Margaret Hinshaw, Vice-President: Miriam Walthall, Secretary: Helen Stanley, Silver Masque: Bob Ask.
